The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace is a unique global network of policy research centers in Russia, China, Europe, the Middle East and the United States. Their mission is to advance the cause of peace through analysis and development of fresh policy ideas and direct engagement and collaboration with decision-makers in government, business and civil society.

The Carnegie Endowment annually holds a rigorous national competition to select approximately 12 graduating seniors to serve as research assistants. Due to the limited number of students accepted, it is required that all applicants be nominated by the Politics Department. The selected students are matched with senior associates - academics, former government officials, lawyers and journalists from around the world - to work on a variety of international affairs issues. Junior Fellows have the opportunity to conduct research for Carnegie publications, participate in meetings with high-level officials, contribute to congressional testimony and organize briefings attended by scholars, journalists and government officials.

Juniors Fellows spend one year at the Carnegie Endowment in Washington, DC, beginning August 1, 2019. Positions are full-time and include salary and benefits package.

Interns may be assigned to provide research assistance to associates working on projects such as:

- Democracy, Conflict, and Governance Program
- U.S. Foreign Policy and Diplomacy - The Junior Fellow will support President Ambassador William J. Burns on research and writing that seeks to shape American diplomacy. Applicants should have coursework in U.S. foreign policy, broad-gauged regional interests, an interest in policy analysis and formulation, and superb writing skills.
- Nuclear Policy Program
- Technology and International Affairs Program and Cyber Policy Initiative
- Middle East Program - Strong reading fluency and the ability to perform academic as well as on-line research in Arabic essential. Strong background in Middle East politics and/or history is a huge plus.
- South Asia Program - A strong academic background in international relations theory, political theory, or international political economy is essential, along with an interest in military issues. The ability to perform quantitative data manipulation is required and a strong mathematical background is a plus.
- China Studis (Asia Program) - Mandarin Chinese reading skills a huge plus.
- Japan Studies (Asia Program) - Japanese reading skills required.
- Economics (Asia Program) - Mandarin Chinese reading skills a huge plus. Strong background in economics essential.
- Russian and Eurasian Program - Excellent Russian reading skills required.
- Geoeconomics and Strategy Program

Candidates must be graduating seniors or students who graduated within the past academic year and be nominated by the Politics Department. You are not eligible for consideration if you have started graduate studies. Applications for nomination are due by noon Friday, December 7th. Please e-mail your application to ttucker@oberlin.edu. Finalists in the selection process will be interviewed by video in the spring. Selection decisions will be made no later than March 31st.
