Books:

Eve Sandberg and Seth Binder, Mohammed VI's Strategies for Moroccan Economic Development (London and New York: Routledge Press, 2020; republished in paperback, 2021)

This book analyzes the economic development choices initiated by Morocco's King Mohammed VI since he ascended the throne in 1999 and situates those choices in the political economy development literature.

Examining the policies enacted by the King, the authors argue that over the past twenty years Mohammed VI has achieved some outstanding successes in modernizing the foundational economic sectors of Morocco, but the benefits of this development have not reached all Moroccans. With its focus on economic development, this book explores the ways in which Mohammed VI's development strategies have, in part, resembled the neoliberal model advocated by Western powers and institutions, as well as how the King adopted some of the European practices of state intervention found in the "varieties of capitalism" models across Europe. Additionally, Mohammed VI's Strategies for Moroccan Economic Growth looks at the way in which the King has sought to utilize "leapfrog" technologies so that Morocco has become a leader in certain productive sectors and is not just catching up to rival producers. The book also examines the extent to which Moroccan citizens have benefited from the economic transformations, arguing that not all Moroccans have benefited; many Moroccan citizens in 2019 echo the same economic concerns that were voiced in 1999 when King Mohammed VI first assumed the throne.

Darko Opoku and Eve Sandberg, eds. Challenges to African Entrepreneurship in the 21st Century (New York: Palgrave MacMillan, 2018)

This book asks why have black African businesses been so difficult to establish and sustain? The authors argue that African states' domestic political networks, not their markets, are the primary variables that determine the success of African businesses. In order for their enterprises to survive, African business actors have had to devise creative coping strategies (political and technical) and assume unusual responsibilities that previously were undertaken by state institutions -- and in some cases -- by non-governmental organizations. The book calls upon donors and African government leaders, who are placing their bets on individual entrepreneurs to spur national development, to address the obstacles that African entrepreneurs face.

The editors' names are presented alphabetically. In addition to editing the volume, each editor contributed two solo-authored chapters.

Eve Sandberg and Kenza Aqertit, Moroccan Women, Activists, and Gender Politics: An Institutional Analysis (Lanham, MD: Lexington Books/Rowman & Littlefield, 2014)

Using both feminist and institutionalist approaches, Sandberg and Aqertit explore how in twenty-five years Moroccan women activists altered their national gender institution to improve substantially the lives of all Moroccan women. Sandberg and Aqertit operationalize and offer an institutional template for studying change in national gender institutions that can be adopted by practitioners and scholars in other country settings. Available in both hardback and paperback.
